Like many organizations, Hospice of the Golden Isles is facing an unprecedented crisis with the increasing prevalence of COVID-19. Our hospice team continues to provide essential hospice and palliative care services for our patients and families throughout our five-county service area in southeast coastal Georgia.

The current emergency situation has significantly increased our agency's need for personal protection equipment (PPE) because our staff are following recommended "universal precautions" on every patient encounter. Every staff member conducting direct patient care wears gloves and a mask on each visit, and sometimes additional face shields and isolation gowns.

Please consider making a gift to help us fund the purchase of essential medical supplies at a level that greatly exceeds our budget.

On behalf of our front-line staff, thank you for donating today at COVID-19 RELIEF

HGI CEO, Karen Miller, Leaving Coastal Georgia

HGI recently announced that their long-tenured Chief Executive Officer, Karen Brubaker Miller, is resigning at the end of May. Karen joined HGI as CEO in 2007. She will be relocating to Roanoke, Virginia to take a senior leadership position at a non-profit hospice and will join her husband, Mark, who relocated to Virginia earlier this year after accepting a new position of his own.

Karen Miller stated: "I will always be incredibly proud of our team's excellent care for our patients and our many accomplishments: forty years of serving this community, the national Hospice Honors award for eight consecutive years, expanding and improving our Hospice House, launching a palliative care program, and weathering three hurricanes together, just to name a few." Miller is confident that HGI will continue to thrive and carry out its mission for decades to come.

Thank you for 13 years of leadership.
You will be greatly missed, Karen!
